Brisbane band AXXONN enlists former AFL star for Music Clip

With no shortage of connections in high places, AXXONN in celebration of their EP release "Masters Of The Epic Day" have enlisted former AFL star, Mark 'Jacko' Jackson to star in their debut music clip.

Speaking from their Brisbane based studio just prior to embarking on their 25 date tour of the UK and Europe, AXXONN's Tom Hall and Ian Rogers had this to say "Employing Jacko for a music clip wasn't a hard decision, Jacko as a person represents both the varying sonic attributes of our sound in combination with finesse, good times and sheer brutality, Jacko is a guy that is true to himself and says 'Fuck You' to anyone that questions it, how can AXXONN not endorse such a guy?, Jacko is a forgotten legend and AXXONN's bringing him back!!"

Mark 'Jacko' Jackson fits perfectly into AXXONN's new track from their EP, The Second Death. AXXONN states that by giving fallen Australian icons a place to continue to convey their talents, they are doing both the Australian public and music industry a massive favour in these hard economic times. In the coming weeks AXXONN will take to the UK and Europe with a string of shows book in with notable supports with bands such as WORRIEDABOUTSATAN and MOTHERFUCKING in what proves to be a strong debut overseas tour for the band.
